Integrating Woman Leaders, Inc announces newly formed subsidiary, Integrating Corporate Leaders (ICL).

Indianapolis, IN- July 18, 2011- Integrating Woman Leaders, Inc announces their newly formed subsidiary, Integrating Corporate Leaders, Inc. (ICL), to broaden their consulting services in executive leadership and skill development training.

Founder & President, Jennifer Browning Holmes recognized the need for corporations to include diverse initiatives that embrace strategies to retain their bench of high potential diverse leaders. Changing cultures requires a focus on developing both individual leaders' capacity and organizational leadership capability to improve the overall performance. ICL offers executive training that accelerates strategy and business results by unlocking the leadership potential of individuals and organizations with state of the art leadership development programs to enhance core competencies and team behaviors.

"Corporations remain under pressure to address the growing need to create diverse leadership teams in order to remain competitive in their industry. It is crucial for professionals at all levels to build the core competencies and skills to be effective leaders. Organizations that invest early in the leadership development of their high-performing contributors position themselves competitively for the future. This development creates a bench of leaders who are prepared for the next level of responsibility and to also help move the organization forward," states Ms. Holmes.

ICL works with organizations to implement creative leadership training that guides them to achieve more than imagined by thinking and acting beyond boundaries through an array of tools and programs.

"Jennifer and her team found the true value add in our core strengths, solidified our strategic plan, motivated the organization, defined our future, challenged us to play to our full potential, and more. Their comprehensive assessment process and leadership training programs helped us focus on a project that significantly increased our annual revenue goals, enabling us to grow our company by 30% in one year, states, Brad Quinn, President and CEO, of Pulmodyne.
