Integrating Woman Leaders announces partnership with Mentoring Women's Network to offer virtual mentoring program

INDIANAPOLIS (Feb. 10, 2015) - Integrating Woman Leaders, Inc. (IWL) is proud to announce an innovative virtual mentoring program, in partnership with Mentoring Women's Network.

The program is designed to connect, inspire and develop women nationwide, personally and professionally through mentoring relationships. The online mentoring platform will pair each participant with a qualified counterpart, whom shares similar values and visions, to ensure successful outcomes with the program. It boasts webinar trainings designed to enhance the mentoring experience, allowing participants to build strong relationships and grow leadership skills.

"Our partnership with Mentoring Women's Network will allow us to continue to serve our efforts in mentoring women, advancing careers, and provide more women with the opportunity to garner valuable knowledge and skills from qualified mentors," said Jennifer Browning Holmes, president and CEO of IWL.

IWL and Mentoring Women's Network strive to collaborate with like-minded organizations to propel the vision of women supporting women.

"We are elated to be partnering with Integrating Woman Leaders," said Alison Martin-Books, founder and chief partnerships officer at Mentoring Women's Network. "The collaboration of both organizations, who are focused on advancing women leaders and connecting them to resources, is critical in the current landscape. We look forward to working with their team to create a lasting impact on women in the communities we serve."

Through this program, IWL and Mentoring Women's Network will continue to facilitate integral relationships between ambitious women, whom aim to support each other in career and personal life.
